To Our Friends in the Country-Inducements to New Subscribers

We desire, if possible, to make THE NEWS, which is already without exception the cheapest newspaper in the South, a regular visitor in every well regulated household in this and the adjoining States. As an inducement to the planters to subscribe to THE NEWS before the expira tion of the present year, we have arranged with Messrs. Walker, Evans & Cogswell, the publishers of the Rural Carolinian, to supply that new and superb agricultural magazine, together with THE NEWS, to all new subscribers, at the following very low rates:

one year, for six dollars and fifty cents. THE TRI-WEEKLY NEWS and the RURAL CARO LINIAN, one year, for four dollars.

Subscriptions to the two publications may b the proprietors of the Rural Carolinian. But persons desiring to avail themselves of this offer must do so before the first of January next, as the arrangement will not be extended beyond in Brooklyn, N. Y., on the occasion of a sermon by Eider Theodore Curtis, of Salt Lake City, who arrived on Saturday night. The New York Times says: "Many of those present were young and handsome Weish girls, besides a number of persons who had just come from England, and who Sons who had just come from England, and who are walting here for an opportunity to pursue their journey to the 'valley of the mountains.' Elder Potts, an Englishman, and the presiding officer, received the brethren and sisters as they entered, and to each extended a cordial welcom conducting the women to scats in the body of the church, and the elders, of whom there were more than a score, to seats upon a raised dais, on which was also the reading desk. Previous to the ermon the communion was administered, breas and water being used, and the congregation singing all the while their peculiar religious songs. Elder Curtis afterwards delivered a sermon in defence of polygamy."

The Situation in France.

The twenty-eight opposition French deputles who demand "the right of the people "to govern themselves," are considerate enough to say that they will use peaceful means "un'ess an attempt is made to silence "them by force." However brave their words, and however great their apparent moderation, these deputies know perfectly well that none but peaceful modes of action are within their power, and that the Man of Destiny has borne and forborne so long, that the eighty thousand men who garrison Paris will hardly be marched out to silence by force even twenty-eight proclaimers of

The policy of age is not the policy of youth. Napoleon reflects, and doubts because he reflects. The hesitation with which he is charged may well be due, more to an anxous pondering of the difficulties of the situation than to a paralysis of the energy and nerve which inspired him eighteen years ago. For months past the Emperor has allowed the tongue and the pen full swing. The restrictions on the press and the right of meeting in public have become a dead letter, and as was expected, both journalists and mob orators make up for their long silence by a revolting display of coarseness and indecency. Gleeful paragraphists wrote with brutal joy of the "mortal sickness" of the Emperor; they insulted the bones of his mother and assailed the honor of his wife. And yet Napoleon has not, as he might have done, crushed out the revilers; nor has he dispersed with the bayonet the meetings of curb and gutter. Rochefort, himself, is not allowed the honors of martyrdom, but is permitted to return to the capital and be come a candidate for the Corps Legislatif. In this way the Emperor has shown the people at large that popular leaders know not the distinction between liberty and license, and that the men who are dangerous when threatened with Cayenne or the guillotine, are harmless as sucking doves when the official hand is not raised against them. The pinch of powder confined in the crevice of the rock may shatter the mass to the base; touched off in free air, it may scatter the surface dust, but its breaking power is nothing.

It was not to be expected that the most violent members of the opposition, when freed from all restraint, would confine them selves to words. They did attempt to fire the Parisian heart and make the Faubourgs ripe for revolution. When the 26th October lawned Paris was filled with veteran soldiery. There was no concealment about it. Before the decisive moment came, the clank of the cavalry, the tramp of the infantry, the rumble of the artillery were heard by all Paris-by St. Antoine as well as by St. Germaine. The Emperor showed his strength, and the opposition demonstration was confined to an harangue in the Place Vendome by a half crazy citizen. The bourgeoisic, the rentiers-or holders of government bonds and stocks-all who had something to lose by anarchy and riot, felt that they had a ruler who, whatever his faults, could give security to their homes and save their property from destruction.

We do not look for a new and bloody Revolution. The holders of the public funds, numbered by millions, all the property-holders in the towns, and the land-owners in the country, dread, whether they be Napoleonist, Orleanist or Republican, a violent change of dynasty. The opposition is not strong enough to defeat the government in the Chambers, yet it can do much to embarrass the Ministers, and can, if it will, secure the adoption of indispensable reforms. Nor is the Emperor disposed to be stubborn. It is announced that he will select as Minister "a man who can command the support of a "majority of the Corps." This man will be hard to find; but Napoleon may deem it safer to throw some responsibility upon the Chambers, so as to secure in advance an excuse for such action as may be necessary in case of a new runture. The danger of the situation lies in the fact that the prestige of the Emperor is on the wane. Mexico and Sadowa are not forgotten; nor the boyhood of the Prince Imperial; nor the ultramontanism of the Empress. With the French, as with the rest of the world, to be successful is to be great. They care little for the potentate whose sceptre is a distaff; nor have they any feeling save contempt for the royal victim of misfortune. They require that France shall be prosperous at home and honored and feared abroad, and may now begin to doubt whether Napoleon can give them the fullness of their hearts' desire.

Now, if there had only been a Scott, and a Hubbard, and a constabulary, armed with Winchester rifles, in Dacotah Territory, Governor McDougall would not have been driven across the border. The fugitive Governor is calling for troops, and we suggest that "His Excellency," with Hubbard and all his men, bundle off at once to the far Northwest, "His Excellency" has made money, and, judging by his big words, sighs for martial glory. We will take the brave Mc-Dougall, "unsight unseen," nor fear to lose by the change. Our Sumter correspondent speaks with deep feeling of the stealing of cotton by negroes in Samter County. This eternal theft is as injurious to the honest negro as to the white man. We shall see whether the General Assembly will do anything to save our people from the depredations of the midnight robber.

THE Convention of the Di trict Survivors' Association of the State held or the purpose of organizin a State Association will convene in the South Garolina Hall, at 1 o'clock to-day. It is expected that at east On Sunday there was a large assemblage of one-half of the tate will be represented Latter Day Saints at the Free Church (Mormon) by regular delegates.

The Press of the South.

The South has quite enough newspapers Indeed, it may be questioned whether it has not already more of them than, with its present population, it can fairly support. What we do want is that the papers that we have should be stronger in resources and circulation, and better and more enterprising me diums of popular intelligence than they now are. House it is always with satisfaction that we see two of our contemporaries combining their capital, influence and business to form a single press, which must needs be in power, ability and management, the supe rior of either, while in the number of its readers, the value of its advertisements, and the amount of its profits, it is likely to outstrip both. A notable instance of this kind is furnished by the Louisville Courier-Journal, which, uniting the strength of two riva and well-established newspapers, has, in the course of a twelvemonth, become perhaps the most powerful and profitable journal in the Southwest. A similar consolidation has just occurred in Macon, The Journal and Messenger and The Telegraph having linked their fortunes, the combined issue to be known as The Telegraph and Messenger They were both able, popular and prosper ous papers, and the combination, we are sure, will be a happy one alike for readers advertisers and publishers.

The outlay required to sustain a good daily newspaper, now-a-days, is immense and in all cases where the income is inade quate or precarious, proprietors would do : sensible thing to club their means, abilities and hopes in a common venture.

The Bank of Charleston.

We are authorized to say that the surplus fund of the Bank of Charleston, after providing for all liabilities, amounts to $824,400. the securities held by the bank being valued at the prices of the day. The surplus, as above stated, is equal to $25 a share on the capital of the bank. An official statement of the affairs of the bank is about to b made to the Comptroller-General.

Tun Quarterly Review, in its article on the Byron Mystery, omitted only one thing which would have rendered the contradiction of Mrs. Stowe complete. That one thing is now supplied in a second edition of The Review, from which we learn that the charge which Mrs. Stowe represents Lady Byron to have made, was "named by Lord Broughton, and distinctly disclaimed by "Mr. Wilmot Horton on behalf of Lord By-"ron." The conclusion arrived at by the reviewer is, that "if we assume the charge to be false, we at all events clear Mrs. Leigh. But if the charge was well found-"ed, or even if Lady Byron believed it to be "well founded, we do not clear her. She "still stands self-convicted of a prolonged "course of dissimulation and hypocrisy, which is more likely to make angels weep "than hall her a spotless member of the
